Give the Young Man a Chance.

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal: The last part of your editorial on improvements and assessments in to-day's paper prompts me to suggest that you keep right along in that line. In the first place, let me ask the Legislature to give the young men a chance. For instance, I have e piece of real estate that is worth $10,000. An enterprising young man wants it, but has only $1,000. I take what he has and notes for $9,000, with mortgage for balance, and give him a deed. The State makes me pay taxes justly on the $9,000 and makes young man pay on the $1,000 he has in it, but (shame to say) makes him pay taxes on the $9,000 he owes me. Let us have a inw that when the one holding the mortgage pays taxes in the county where the perty is located the one owing the same shall be exempt for that much. With such a law the borrower could afford to pay a resident 1 per cent, more than a nonresident. In that way we would get more personal property on our tax duplicate, keep our interest at home, as well as "give the young man a chance." MERIT WELLS.

statistician of railway operation says that under the most favorable circumstances it costs 90 cents a mile to run a passenger cars, and on a majority of roads it costs $1.10 per mile to haul an ordinary train.

At a two-cent-a-mile rate there would be

Pictures That Experts Said Were Worth a Small Fortune Involved in One Suit-Other Court Cases.

The suit of Mary Ward as next friend of Jennie Ward against the girl's father to set aside a deed for three lots made by Ward's wife, that is pending in Judge Leathers's court, might as well not have been filed. The records in the county recorder's office show that Ward deeded the lots to his children on Dec. 24, 1900, for a Christmas present.

The suit was brought on the alleged ground that Ward only held the property are made that it may lead to some shading | in trust for his children, according to an agreement before his wife died, and that he was about to dispose of them. The complaint alleges that the suit was brought to secure the property for the children.

In an affidavit filed by Thomas Ward he asserts that he is the victim of a conspiracy between his mother and brother, Steve Ward, who are attempting to embarrass him and ruin his business. 3342. Jenkins vs. Lutz. Sullivan C. C. Reversed. Robinson, J.-1. This court on appeal cannot weigh conflicting evidence. 2. It is error to admit proof of the contents of a letter to establish plaintiff's right of action when there has been no foundation laid for the admission of such evidence. 3. When it is sought to impeach a witness the proper foundation should be laid for that purpose when the witness is testifying. 3421. Miller vs. State of Indiana. Jackson C. Reversed. Wiley, J.-1. In a criminal action an arraignment may be waived, but a plea mu be entered, for without a plea there is no issu to trial and a trial without an issue is erron ous. 2. In an appeal from a judgment and viction in a criminal cause where the record does not show an arraignment or waiver, nor a ple judgment will be reversed for failing to 3120.
